A motion by A. G. Webber to appoint a committee on constitution and by-laws was idopted, with instructions to report at the first regular meeting. The committee afterward reported by the chair, were A. G. Webber, Raymond Moffat and Joshua MORNING REVIEW Later the names of the county uperintendent and Oliver Hise were added. The work of organization was here susended to give place to Superintendent Edwards' address. Doctor Edwards spoke of the faulty a

This talk was assigned him by the legislature, and was performed with the assistance of Lane, of cook county; Cook, of Normal; Dougherty, of Peorla; and Kimbrough, of Danville, in the manner evidenced by the copy of the school law in the hands of the directors. The amendments were few and were enacted after the adoption of the committee's report. He took up some of these amendments and discussed them in detail. The one relative to township high schools he approved most warmly. He said the preservation of the state depended on the intelligence of the rural neighborhoods; that the township high school could furnish such instruction as the Chicago high school. He described the plan of its organization and operation and cited as an instance of the successful operation of the scheme under a special law the high school at Princeton, and pins to run us, but will we go? He also discussed the five-year state cortificates, the election of trustees, and the recording of treasurers' bonds. The work of organization was completed by the appointment of committees. The time of the next meeting was fixed after a multitude of motions and amendments at l o'clock p. m. on the first Saturday in Oc
